The ongoing solo exhibition by Neil Gall at Aurel Scheibler, Berlin, ends on November 26. It's your last opportunity to check out the exhibition.

Gall begins a process of deconstruction prior to putting brush to canvas, building models in his studio with available and found used materials. His art comprises mysterious and fanciful arrangements of banal objects, where toys, plasticine, cardboard, threads, and adhesive tape become models. Gall depicts them with a startling accuracy in his paintings and drawings. With this painting series, his focus has shifted to pure colour and form. With a formal reference to both Hard Edge and Illusionism, the paintings initially appear as large paper collages.

The exhibition is on view at Galerie Aurel Scheibler, Schöneberger Ufer 71, 10785 Berlin, Germany. For details, visit, www.aurelscheibler.com
